Recommended Resources: Secondary PTS (Post-Traumatic Stress)

Definition	Secondary Post-Traumatic Stress (PTS) can occur when living with someone with diagnosed PTSD – and their symptoms. A household with PTSD is one on edge, looking to avoid triggers, and working to maintain calm. Over time, a caregiver or children may begin to show “mirroring” signs of secondary stress. While it is not identified in the DSM-5 as a disorder, it occurs roughly 50% of the time in spouses and 40% in children (NAMI 2015).
